“I Should Have Written That ‘Thank You’ Note!”

(Luke 17:11-19)

There you are with _____ other lepers.

Under Old Testament law it was the Temple _____, not a _____, who alone had authority to pronounce a leper cured.

Maybe some of these lepers would have said “thank you” but they were too caught up in the _____ of the moment. So only _____ returned to express his gratitude.

Some important lessons we need to learn:

#1.- Saying thank you, is a sign of _____.

None of us has much _____ for the person unwilling to take the _____ to say thanks.

We have made all kinds of _____ in our hours of need. What kind of people are we if we have not been equally as eager to pour out our expressions of _____?

#2.- Saying thanks makes us _____ people.

We express gratitude because we are people of _____ and saying thanks, in turn, _____ our character.

#3.- Saying thank you keeps a channel of _____ open.

In writing a “thank you” note we’re saying not only that we are _____, but also that the relationship is _____ to us and we want to keep it _____.

Thanksgiving and _____ are among the most effective means of keeping open channels of _____.

The most effective way of expressing our _____ to God is to _____ His blessings to someone else.

It’s not too late to write that “Thank You” note. Do it today!
